

The fact the FCC is considering further consolidation of the media is terrifying to me. Perhaps the justification of the FCC is partly right--it does inspire highly competitive marketplaces--yet in many other ways, it removes competition and allows the media to say whatever it would like. Further, highly competitive marketplaces are hardly positive when relating to advertisements and so forth, where the marketplace is already frenzied. Please stop this consolidation, and revert to the older rules of the FCC. Remember that the public airwaves are PUBLIC space.
